Fourth of July: fireworks spark concerns about safety and insurance

What to Know

- Fireworks started an estimated 19,500 fires in 2018, according to the National Fire Protection Association \(NFPA\).
- The risk of fireworks injury is highest for children ages five to nine.
- A standard Homeowners Insurance policy covers fire damage to your home and property.

SEATTLE, July 1, 2020– With annual Independence Day festivities likely to look much different for Northwest families and communities due to the COVID-19 pandemic, NW Insurance Council joins local public safety officials in reminding people to make fireworks awareness and safety a top priority.

“With communities foregoing fireworks shows, fairs and other public gatherings to slow the spread of Coronavirus, we are already hearing reports of brisk business at fireworks stands,” said NW Insurance Council president Kenton Brine. “But fireworks are restricted or even banned from use in many cities and towns, so it’s important to check local ordinances before investing in fireworks – and important to use common sense if you are lighting fireworks this year.”

Fireworks send over 9,000 people to the emergency room and start over 19,000 fires across the nation each year, according to the most recent data from the National Fire Protection Association (NFPA). NFPA also reports that in 2018, fireworks caused $105 million in direct property damage.

Carelessness or lack of knowledge can lead to a spoiled holiday or worse; severe injuries or property damage. Many communities across the Northwest have enacted ordinances prohibiting all personal use of fireworks, or limiting the types of fireworks and/or the times during which they can be used. It’s a good idea to check with your local fire or law enforcement officials to know the laws in your area.

It’s also important to know – in case the worst happens – what your insurance covers if fireworks or “party fouls” result in damage to your home (or your neighbor’s home) or injuries to guests on your property.

“We want everyone to celebrate safely, but it is also good to know that if an errant ‘roman candle’ sets your roof – or your neighbor’s roof – on fire, or a guest is burned or slips and falls at your backyard barbeque, homeowners policies typically provide coverage,” said Brine.

NW Insurance Council and the Washington State Patrol offer the following information and safety tips to help you enjoy your Independence Day celebration:

- Contact local authorities or check online for fireworks laws specific to your area.
- Always read and follow the instructions listed on fireworks packaging.
- Store fireworks in a cool, dry place out of children’s reach.

- Do not allow children to play with fireworks. Never give sparklers to children age 5 and younger. Always have a responsible adult present.
- Buy fireworks and all pyrotechnics from reliable businesses.
- Always use fireworks outdoors. Never ignite inside your home or garage.
- Always have water handy to douse hot fireworks (a garden hose and a bucket).
- Never experiment or make your own fireworks.
- Light only one firework at a time.
- Never throw or point fireworks at other people.
- Never shoot fireworks in metal or glass containers.
- Never re-light “dud” fireworks. Wait 15-20 minutes, then soak in a bucket of water.
- Stay away from illegal explosives.
- Keep pets indoors for their safety. For more tips about pets and fireworks safety, visit The Humane Society of the United States' website.

If fireworks are used near your home, that means your house and property (and possibly that of your neighbors) are exposed to a risk of fire damage and you, your family and your guests are vulnerable to injury.

If an accident occurs, a standard Homeowners Insurance policy covers fire damage to your home and property, including plants, trees and shrubs (minus your deductible). The same policy also provides coverage if your home is damaged due to the negligence of others (in the event your neighbor’s fireworks display ignites your home or landscape). Your Homeowners Insurance also covers injuries to guests up to the limits of your Liability Coverage. If damage occurs to a vehicle, that damage would be covered by the vehicle owner’s Comprehensive insurance policy, which is an optional coverage most consumers purchase with their auto liability policy.
